I feel the Morse Code requirement is no longer a valid one. There are other methods just as reliable, and the testing plateau it represents does nothing to keep "Bad Operators" from the service. I feel on the other hand, that the dropping of the code requirement will attract more technically oriented people which can do nothing but improve amatuer radio.